A NATION IN DENIAL

President's Message by Phil Arnsby

This summer Elaine and I participated in two missions witnessing on the streets of Ontario with large graphic photos to the reality of abortion. The first mission was in Toronto from July 11 to 15 and the second took place in eight towns and cities in South Western Ontario from Aug. 10 to 15. The Show the Truth missions have been taking place for 12 years and the main organizer is Rosemary Connell from Burnt River, Ontario.

Young and old pro-life people from across Ontario gather and usually sleep in a church basement or Knights of Columbus Hall on their air mattresses, getting up at about 5:30 to 6 a.m. to grab a quick bite, and board the bus. They arrive at the pre-determined spot to set up and pray 30 minutes prior to the first of three 1½ hr. street presentations that day. Everyone witnessing on the mission signs a Code of Conduct and is responsible for adhering to the rules. The line coordinators have walkie-talkies and are responsible for setting out their lines (up to 4 lines) and deal with any difficulties that occur on their line.

In Toronto, we had a blistering hot week that didn't deter us from witnessing at the free-standing abortuaries, busy intersections, and at Union Station. On the way to the church basement at the end of our second day the bus drove through a terrible rain storm (thanks to the Lord we were in the bus) and when we arrived at the hall the storm sewers had backed up and a large part of the basement floor was covered in water. Miraculously, only one of us had wet sleeping gear - it could have been a disaster if all our sleeping gear and bags had been affected. The rain stopped suddenly and after a few hours of clean up we were back in business. The next day one of our members, a man about 75 years old who uses two canes to walk, was sitting on a small stool holding his sign. I was the line captain and the day was so hot. I asked Philippe if he was hurting (he was slumped over). He raised his head, looked at me and said, "Not as much as Jesus when they crucified Him."...amazing response!

The S. W. Ontario mission started in Windsor. A big thank you to Fr. Vince Gulikers for the use of St. Patrick Church Hall and the meals they provided. Fr. Vince said it would be a blessing for the parish for us to be there. Meals were also provided in most of the eight cities/towns - Leamington, Chatham, St. Thomas, Sarnia, Woodstock, Stratford and London. London Knights of Columbus Hall (Council #6246) was our resting place for London area thanks to Grand Knight Leo Gulikers, brother of Fr. Vince Gulikers.

Fr. Tony Van Hee (who has witnessed for 18 years on Parliament Hill in Ottawa) was on both missions and it was possible to have Mass almost everyday. We asked every-one holding a graphic photo to pray at least one hour during each 1½ hour presentation.

I calculated that approximately 27,000 people had an opportunity to see our presentation over a 1½ hour period at the busiest corners. It is likely that over 350,000 people over the 2 weeks of Show the Truth presentations viewed the graphic reality of abortion. Many wanted information and during the two missions we handed out thousands of pro-life pamphlets. There were hundreds of opportunities to discuss the tragedy of abortion with irate, curious, and sympathetic people.

We were interviewed by newspaper reporters and for radio broadcast - Windsor had a 2 hour call-in show. Letters continue to appear in local papers to this day and the ripple effect of the two weeks is ongoing. Many gave us the thumbs up or came up to us and openly congratulated us for our courage.

Some adults don't want children exposed to these photos, particularly those who have children. Their anxiety is a concern of ours as well. However, after more than 500 Canadian presentations, we are confident that when parents' reactions are controlled and age appropriate answers are given to their children in a loving and calm manner that children are not adversely affected.

The toughest part of a mission for me personally is not the 6 hours a day on the street, or crunched together sleeping, or the daily abuse on the street. It is the lack of support from some other pro-lifers for this type of witness. Some say it is too extreme. Extreme to me is not displaying the photos of mangled babies, extreme to me is the destruction of the child in the womb.

The bottom line...these Show the Truth missions take place because our greatest and top priority is to stop the premeditated and deliberate killing of our brothers and sisters and sometimes this involves upsetting the living. Let those who are angry with our witness be thankful that someone cared for them enough to allow them to live.

When the killing stops there will be no need to witness on the streets. We pray for an end to abortion.

SOMEBODY MUST PROTECT THE UNBORN

by Pat Bannon of Stratford and published in the Beacon Herald

I, too, was outraged last Friday, not at the pictures but what was depicted by them. The cruel and torturous dismemberment of unborn children is a very real part of our society. The pictures show the truth of what is actually happening every day in our government-funded hospitals and so-called clinics.

It was pictures very much like these - pictures of the atrocities that took place in the Nazi concentration camps - that outraged most of Canada and the United States after the Second World War. People were so outraged that they wanted anyone associated with it to be tried as war criminals. Just like in Nazi Germany, as Jews were considered non-persons, also in Canada and the United States, the unborn are considered non-persons with no protection from the law.

The people who stand holding the signs and pictures that show the injustice and infanticide that is taking place may be likened to the people who protected the Jews in the Second World War or the ones who helped the slaves to freedom or the ones who aided women in the suffrage movement. They stand witness that in our society, injustice like this cannot be tolerated. These people are heroes.

As far as the children having nightmares after seeing these pictures, I believe that we should all be having nightmares.

From the Office

by Margarida Andre, LARTLA office coordinator

I hope that everyone has had the opportunity to enjoy the summer. Once again, I had the privilege of hosting our LARLA volunteers' and board members' summer BBQ at our home. We all had a great time and the food was fabulous! It was truly memorable.

Summer gathering of volunteers at Margarida & Danny Andre's home.

I would like to thank our volunteers who continued to come in during the summer, helping out with various projects.

We are now looking forward to the Western Fair, Life Chain, and Fanshawe College Sexual Awareness Week.

We have also worked closely with Western Lifeline, the new pro-life club on main campus. We supported them with pro-life material including a Western Lifeline banner for their upcoming Club Week. We also hope to be of assistance to the King's College Live for Life Club.

I close this report with an appeal to you, our members, who may be thinking about doing something more for the pro-life movement...

Why not join us in volunteering at the office? We are in need of someone for every second Friday afternoon and at times to replace regular volunteers who may be absent. Please call me at the office for additional information.

Thank you for your support of LARLA. May God bless you!

Walkathon 2008

On Saturday, June 7, the London Area Right to Life held the Annual Walkathon. We are grateful for work done by Sherry Doiron in coordinating the Walk. This pro-life witness is our main fundraiser and we raised over $20,000 with over 100 walkers participating.

We thank the many clergy and pastors who supported this event. We started the day with a Catholic Mass celebrated by Fr. Gil Simard and concelebrated by Fr. Joseph Morawski, Fr. Mukucha Kathemo, and Fr. Peter Amszej and an interdenominational prayer service led by Pastor Joe Campbell.

After registering their pledges, obtaining water bottles and pro-life balloons, walkers gathered for the ribbon cutting by Trudy Ferwerda, and started on the 5 km Walk.

After the Walk, we were royally entertained by musician Jake Levesque and the children enjoyed the happy clown (Sharon Lang) and her pro-life puppet. As usual Ted Schmidt and his crew did a great job with the BBQ. We would also like to thank the coordinators Marian Obeda (on the registration tables training Judy Newton and Teresa Gilbank), Deb Normand (check points), and Janice Rutledge (crossing guards).

We are indebted to the clergy at the parishes who allowed us to take pledges at their churches - Holy Family, Mary Immaculate, and St. George's. Holy Family raised the most this year with an amazing $3,495.00 (Fr. Joseph Morawski walked for his pledges.) We are very grateful to the many who collected pledges, and to those who allowed us to walk for them or joined us in the Walk. Finally, we thank those who donated to this important fund-raising witness.

Trudy Ferwerda, 85 years young, not only collected pledges and cut the ribbon to start the walk but also completed the walk with the aid of her 2 canes. Amazing.

Ted Smidt (back to camera) and his helper BBQ up a great treat.

HI I'm Eve and I am 8 years old and I don't know alot about abortion but I know what it is and what it looks like but I know that I should help stop it because it is sad and it is something that needs to be stoped and I would like to help. I have seen pictures from my aunt Laura and Siobhan and I feel really bad so I have donated 10.00 that I got from my birthday party. your wellcome
P.S. I wrote this by my self and Eve o'kane I had no help but how to spell a few words.

LETTER FROM AN 8 YEAR OLD

Pro-lifer Intervenes to Save Baby

Rosemary Connell, the main organizer for Show the Truth Tour, is the mother of eight children, 4 natural and 4 adopted. Lien, one of her adopted children, was born in Vietnam, adopted at age eleven, and is now a young woman. The following is the touching account of pro-life love and perseverance told to us by Rosemary. (The young mother's name has been changed for privacy reasons.)

Lien heard of a 14 year old Vietnamese girl named Sarah who was taken to the doctor by her mother for a pregnancy test and then ultra-sound on a Friday in January to confirm a pregnancy. Despite the baby being 14 weeks old, Sarah and the doctor booked an abortion from the office for the following Tuesday! Lien and I met with Sarah and the father (also 14 years old) and the baby's grandmother for four hours on the Sunday. Sarah's sister and her father refused to meet with us. After a lot of translated discussion, we finally showed Sarah the "Life and Death" pamphlet (literature used by Show the Truth). She looked at it, started to cry and ran upstairs. We were concerned, but half an hour later she said she would not have the abortion.

We sent out emails for prayers and people in turn prayed and forwarded the request on to their contacts. Monday the baby's grandmother called and confirmed that they would not be going to the abortion appointment.

So instead of going for the abortion on the Tuesday, we went to Rosalie Hall (a home for moms in crisis in Scarborough) and Sarah moved in. She got her credits for the term at school and her baby boy was born in late June. Sarah is back home and, although her father is still angry, the family is thrilled with beautiful little David.

Notice the "thumbs up".

According to Vietnamese culture, a party is held to celebrate a baby's one month birthday. We attended and I held little David! He's safe, beautiful and loved by a huge extended family. I thank God for Lien who is committed to the sanctity of life and was not stopped by an irate grandfather or nervous grandmother. She represents pro-lifers who faithfully intervene to save babies when God places them between the mother and the abortionist.

— Rosemary Connell

MORGENTALER'S "howling pathologies at work in his mind".

Herman Gooden

Herman Gooden, freelance writer, recently wrote a London Free Press article entitled "Order Award Underhanded". He used material prepared by Evan Solomon for the CBC news in which Evan interviewed Morgentaler: "I'm like a newborn baby," he tells Solomon when asked about his recent health scares. "I enjoy being alive."

"I have an inordinate need to be loved by women," he says. "Sometime during my emotional development, I got the impression my mother didn't love me because there was a younger baby that she devoted a lot of attention to. I believe she neglected me."

Then Morgentaler pulls out a slender volume of his self-published poetry and reads from the title work, The Goddess of the Golden Breast.

"A suckling baby am I / Nursing at the Golden Breast," Morgentaler reads. "Sometimes I would like to devour the breast that is feeding me / To tear at the nipple and bite it... I hate and curse the breast and the mother / I smash the goddess to bits / I look at myself, helpless, small and hungry / And cry."

I don't know if Morgentaler sent this opus to publishers, but I can think of a number of pro-life groups that would gladly have incurred the expense of publishing this dreck so as to expose the howling pathologies at work in his mind.

We encourage prayer for the conversion of Henry Morgentaler.

ORGAN DONORS - BEWARE!

Aug. 13 and 14, 2008 (LifeSiteNews.com) In an article that is sure to rock the world of Organ donation the highly respected New England Journal of Medicine (NEJM) has published an article which backs up the objections of various pro-life groups, as well as some scientists and physicians, to certain types of organ donation which involve the removal of vital organs from patients believed to be dead. The problem, say the authors of the NEJM article, is that in many cases these patients may not be dead at all.

Dr. John Shea

Key experts in the medical field have, since its inception, considered the 1969 invention of 'brain death' and the more recent criteria of 'cardiac death' as unsupportable criteria for true death. If it is true, however, that brain death and cardiac death are invalid as criteria for true death, it would make morally illicit vital organ donation, since such donation would in some cases result directly in the killing of the donor for the purpose of harvesting his organs.

Dr. John Shea, medical advisor to Campaign Life Coalition and a physician who has done extensive research on the ethical quandaries surrounding organ transplants, warns that among the many problems is the pressure created by the organ transplant business, whether public or privately funded, to re-define death to obtain organs from patients who may still be alive.

In a detailed article in Catholic Insight magazine, Dr. Shea wrote that some tissues such as bone marrow, corneas, heart valves and skin may be removed after death has indisputably occurred, after the loss of respiration and cardiac function and the onset of rigor mortis. Other organs and parts of organs can be donated by a living donor; these include kidneys and portions of the liver. Both of these situations are morally unproblematic.

But the use of "brain death" and "cardiac death" criteria to obtain soft tissue organs for transplant has given rise to insoluble ambiguities that put vulnerable patients at risk. Dr. Shea wrote, "A diagnosis of death by neurological criteria is theory, not scientific fact."

"There is no consensus on diagnostic criteria for brain death. They are the subject of intense international debate. Various sets of neurological criteria for the diagnoses of brain death are used. A person could be diagnosed as brain dead if one set is used and not be diagnosed as brain dead if another is used."

In cardiac death, doctors wait for a short time after the cessation of the heart beat, sometimes as briefly as five minutes, and then declare death while other body systems are still functioning. In numerous cases, however, patients have been known spontaneously to revive long after the five minute cut-off. Even so, doctors under pressure to procure organs are shortening even the five minute wait period to maximize the quality of the organs.

A recent case in France where a patient revived on the operating table as surgeons were about to remove his organs, is only the latest in a string of such events.

GARDASIL UPDATE

Our Sept. 2007 Newsletter reported 3 deaths. To date there have been 21 deaths.

Ottawa, Aug. 14, 2008 (LifeSiteNews.com) - Critics say that the reasons to avoid using the HPV vaccine, Gardasil, continue to pile up in the form of thousands of instances of severe side effects, including numerous deaths. In response to the mounting evidence that the vaccine may not be safe for widespread use, the Centre for Disease Control (CDC) is slated to release a study in October that will attempt to determine the validity of these reports.

Judicial Watch, a public interest group, has closely monitored Gardasil since it was released by creator Merck in 2006, periodically detailing statistics on the numerous side effects users have experienced. The most recent report alleges that the drug has been responsible for 21 deaths and 9,749 adverse reactions, including 78 outbreaks of genital warts and 10 miscarriages.

As daunting as these current statistics are, it seems that even they may be gravely underestimating the health risks associated with using Gardasil. A study by the New England Journal of Medicine claims that only about 10% of drug induced side effects are reported to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System.

Furthermore, FiercePharma.com claims that experts have criticized the actual effectiveness of the cervical cancer vaccine, saying Merck has exaggerated the drug's usefulness.

A DIRECT THREAT TO CANADIANS
BILL C-562

Brief excerpts from Euthanasia Prevention Coalition (EPC)
Newsletter July 2008

On June 12, 2008, Francine Lalonde MP (Bloc Quebecois) from La Pointe-de-l'Île introduced Bill C-562: an Act to amend the Criminal Code (right to die with dignity). This bill has only minor revisions to Bill C-407, which Lalonde introduced in 2005.

“The bill is a direct threat to the lives of people with disabilities and/or people with chronic conditions who are often viewed as being without any prospect of relief.”

Comments by Alex Schadenberg (Executive Director of EPC):

Legalizing euthanasia or assisted suicide is always wrong because:

- It directly and intentionally threatens the lives of the most members of society. The lives of people with disabilities and chronic conditions, people who live with depression and mental illness, and others are directly threatened by euthanasia and assisted suicide.
- It changes the trust relationship between the medical practitioner and the patient.
- Society cannot legislate autonomy and choice in relation to acts that intentionally and directly cause death. No level of safeguard will ever protect vulnerable people from the subtle pressure to “choose” death.

Canadians must promote the right of every Canadian to excellent end-of-life care and to guarantee that every Canadian is treated with respect and dignity until their natural death.

Pausing for Motherhood

by Shannon Popkin

ARE THE TALENTS OF PROFESSIONAL WOMEN WASTED ON RAISING CHILDREN?

She walks out of her office carrying a box filled with picture frames and coffee mugs, along with a final paycheque and a gift certificate for Babies “R” Us stuck in one side. Reaching her car, she slides the box onto the back seat, next to a brand new infant car seat...

Though this scene is becoming increasingly common in North America, not everyone is singing the praises of women who trade their careers for motherhood. Philosopher and author Linda Hirshman says, “Women who quit their jobs to stay home with children are making a mistake... The tasks of housekeeping and child rearing are not worthy of the full time and talents of intelligent and educated human beings.”

Corporate ladders don’t usually have rungs entitled “Push Pause; Become Stay-at-Home Mom.” A morning spent patting my newborn’s back, rattling a lavender elephant and folding miniature jeans doesn’t exactly capitalize on the years and expense poured into my education and training. But Linda’s point couldn’t be more wrong. Could an occupation really be more fulfilling than caring for my children?

Opposite Progression

I remember a particularly rewarding moment in my career when my boss said, “Shannon, I have more client requests for you than any other team member!” Though I modestly kept these words to myself, I’d be ashamed to know how many times I reviewed them. It felt so good to be affirmed and esteemed for my contributions.

But after 10 years, even if I could locate my former boss, I’d have a hard time retrieving any remnant of this comment from his memory. And my “requesters” are more likely to remember their Christmas lists from 10 years ago than to recall asking for me.

This compliment has long expired, and any fulfillment it offered was cashed out way back when it mattered. Quite an opposite progression happens with parenting. I recently happened upon a picture of me holding my newborn son. He was sleeping against my chest with his arms snuggled in tight and his head resting under my chin. I spent several minutes studying each curve of his face and the shape of his pudgy fists. The time that has passed since this photo was taken emphasizes the tender significance of that moment.

Relation Rewards

Suggesting that I'm squandering my time and talents by caring for my children is accurate only if my objective is personal advancement. If I were pursuing clout and recognition, the business world would be my best trajectory. But where would that trajectory ultimately lead me?

Would I come to the end of my life and find my most productive years largely represented by an engraved plaque, tarnishing in someone's attic? Perhaps pushing pause on personal advancement makes more sense.

A friend recently asked my three-year-old for a hug. He smiled and squeezed her tightly but then abruptly stepped back with a frown. She asked, "What's wrong, buddy? What did I do?" Scowling, he responded, "I love my mom," as if to settle any question of his loyalty. I know happiness can't be quantified, but I'd challenge the thrill of any career advancement with the joy triggered by my curly-headed little boy.

Seeing Ambition Clearly

I don't know Linda Hirshman, but I'll bet if we had coffee, she would challenge me to bask in the glory of a great career. While some moms may need to work to support their families, Linda's hopes for me are constrained to a title following my name and a bank account to back it up. But as nice as these rewards are, they can't compare with my daughter's delighted giggle after she plays trick on me or the intense look in my son's eyes when he whispers, "Mommy, I have to tell you a secret."

And my aspiration isn't confined to this life; I want more in the life to come. Jesus, the One who will complete my life's performance evaluation, offers but one habit of highly effective people: to become the servant of all. I know that smelly diapers, puddles of spit-up and chins dripping with drool aren't high-profile assignments. But Jesus promises that if I emulate His life by giving up mine, my reward will not be forgotten after the retirement party. If He says to me, "Well done, good and faithful servant," the elation and fulfillment packed into that moment will make any relinquished accolades seem trivial.

With permission from Shannon Popkin as submitted to Focus on the Family Magazine.

Shannon Popkin has enjoyed the last nine years of "pursuing more" at home, caring for her three children. She lives in Grandville, Michigan.
